

DEPARTMENT OF CLASSICS

PhD Committee Form

The dissertation committee should consist of four members: a dissertation director who will serve as the principal dissertation adviser (if necessary, a dissertation co-director); two other faculty members from the Classics department; and an external member who will serve as representative-at-large of the graduate faculty. All committee members must have a graduate directive status and the external member must be tenured. The dissertation director may, but need not, be the student's "Major Professor," as assigned by the DGS. Additional members beyond the required four may be also appointed at the discretion of the chair. When deemed appropriate, changes to the dissertation committee must be approved by the department chair.

Please submit a signed copy of this form to the DGS.
